HUMANITARIAN HR CONFERENCE

2-4 October 2019, Antwerp, Belgium

Today, many aid organisations recognise the importance of accountability to affected populations, to staff and to donors. Yet in practice this is not always easy to achieve.

How can we, as humanitarian HR professionals be at the forefront of driving positive culture change within our organisations?

This question will be the heart of this year's HHR and the conference will focus on building trust in people, in organisations and in the wider system.

Together, we will:

- Understand the concept, principles and benefits of “High Trust” workplaces for the humanitarian aid sector;
- Share case studies and lessons on how organisations build and repair trust levels;
- Discover the role of leaders and HR should play in the creation of open, transparent, honest and dialogue-centred cultures;
- Explore incorporating Code of Conduct and other people management policies as the means of sustaining trust;
- Develop actions in building team awareness and alignment around the value of trust.

As a result of the conference, you will be able to:

- Understand and use good practice people management practices as foundational elements of your organisation;
- Define key steps that HR professionals and leaders can take for re-wiring their organisations to build accountability and trust.
